Town of HAVANNAH.

THE undersigned, trustees for the proprietors of the scite where the town of HAVANNAH is to be laid off, give this public notice, that lots in the above mentioned town, will be offered for sale, on the premises, on the 26th and 27th days of October next.

Havannah is situated in Lauderdale county, Alabama Territory, on the north side of the Tennessee river, immediately above Colbert's reserve, within nine miles of the town of Florence, and about eight miles from Colbert's ferry.

The town of Havannah is included in that section of country which was recently sold at Huntsville when forty two townships brought to the Government the unprecedented sum of 5,000,000 dollars. The simple fact that within this district, land sold, for purposes of agriculture, from 30 to 78 dollars per acre, furnishes an incontestible evidence of the fertility of the soil and the value of its productions: The climate too, is of an agreeable temperature, subject neither to the excessive heats of the south nor the chilling blasts of the north; yet the fruits and growth of the latter arrive at great perfection, and the most profitable species of agriculture of the former, are produced in the most luxurious abundance.

Of all the scites for towns in the late sales, the town of Havannah has incomparably the highest claim to precedence in a commercial point of view.

Considering the situation of this place, as it respects its commercial advanatages, and the rising importance of the north side of the Tennessee river within the limits of this Territory, and the remarkably rich settlements in the adjacent counties of Murry, Giles, Lawrence and Wayne, in Tennessee, all of which must necessarily depend upon this point as being the head of navigation on the Tennessee for steam boats, barges and keel-boats, for their supply of foreign articles. We say, taking these local advantages into consideration, many persons who are to be extensively engaged in mercantile and agricultural pursuits, by their repeated solicitations have induced the proprietors to lay off a town on this scite.

The purchaser of cotton, the staple of this section of country, will find it emphatically to his interest to locate himself at Havannah, where he can ship his purchases any season of the year which will arrive in market several months earlier than the cotton from Madison county, or any place above the Muscle Shoals. Thus this place embraces important advantages both in the export and import trade.

Havannah is situated at a point on the Tennesse river, which is the nearest possible rout from the most populous settlements in Kentucky and Tennessee to the Mississippi, the southern parts of Alabama Territory and West Florida. It may here be remarked, that a Ferry will be established here, by which the river can be crossed with as much ease as at any other point whatever—situated immediately at the lower end of an Island, known by the name of Long Island: no convenient place is offered for crossing after leaving the military ferry till you reach this point.

Much has been said about the value of lands East of Lauderdale, in Limestone and Madison counties; but when we reflect that the productions in the vicinity of Havannah will anticipate the other in market by several months, and that they are in a degree dependent upon this place for their foreign supplies, the undersigned confidently believe that the situation will attract the attention of discerning and enterprizing men.

Havannah has the advantage of being supplied with pure and wholesome spring water which is not surpassed by any in the western country. The situation of the town is high, with a fine view of this majestic river, and the variegated scenery of a picturesque surrounding country,

Persons disposed to vest a share of their capital in town property, after a careful examination of the map of the southern country, will readily discover the propriety of the selection of this place for a town, being near the head of navigation, on a large and noble river, furnishing the greatest facilities to the commercial and agricultural pursuits of a country equalled by none in America for the fertility of its soil and the value of its productions. An agreeable and healthy point possessing these advantages, cannot fail of rising in importance Every facility will be offered to mechanics who wish to settle in a new place, where the population of all the surrounding country is encreasing with unheard of rapidity and whose wants must be many and urgent.

A plan of the town will be left in the Register's office in Huntsville, at Peter Cheatham's, Columbia, Ten. Capt. B. M. Patterson's, Pulaski, Ten. Major J. D. M'Connell's, Fayetteville, Ten. Big Spring, Franklin county, Alabama.

Terms of sale, one third in one year, one third in three years, and the remaining third in four years from the sale.

Steam Engine Notice.

To those who are or may be concerned.

WHEREAS certain persons have industriously endeavoured to deceive the public, by an effort to impress the idea that Oliver Evans has abandoned his claim to the use of HIGH STEAM.

Therefore, this is to give notice, that all such reports or insinuations are groundless; that said Evans has already commenced suits against the makers of Steam Engines in this place or elsewhere; that he has ordered the subscriber to enter suits both against the makers and proprietors of Steam Engines now making here, and at other places and the public may be assured that suit will be entered for every Steam Engine separately, as soon as it shall have been put in operation.—Those who feel an interest to avoid infringement of said Evans's patent may be informed who the present constructing infringers are.

PITTSBURGH.

Tuesday Morning, Aug. 18.

On the pleasure of Reading.

FROM MY ELBOW CHAIR.

Come then my books, companions safe,
Soothers of care, best antidotes to pain:
Friendly to wisdom, virtue, and to truth—
Full well I know thy talismanic powers
To chase the dull satieties of life:
To wrap the soul in meditation holy;
Or through creative fancy's flowery wilds,
To lead the mind entranc'd.

"Blessed," said the worthy governor of Barataria, "be that man who first invented sleep," and presumptious must that mortal be, who would dispute the opinions of that prince of proverbs, the renowned esquire of the mirror of chivalry, from whose tongue flowed a clear, copious, and inexhaustible stream of wisdom. Show me that minion of fortune, though floating carelessly down the stream of life, who has not frequent occasion to exclaim, when assailed by tedium or vexations, those "ills that flesh is heir to," and from which the oyster alone is exempted, "blessed be that man who first invented sleep." But as that dull, yet fickle god, will not always at our bidding "revisit our eye-lids" and "steep our senses in forgetfulness," but like many a false friend "desert us at our utmost need,"—blessed, thrice blessed, be the memory of that man who first invented books, the antidotes of care, the soothers of disappointed hopes, the "balm of hurt minds." Enshrined be the memory of those benevolent souls, who have wasted their own existence in poring over the midnight lamp, to infuse health and vigour into the minds of succeeding generations; who have strewed thorns over their own pillow, while they were preparing beds of roses for their readers.

I envy not that man, who, though luxuriating in all the varied pleasures that wealth e'er gave, flitting like a meteor through a gazing multitude in all the gaudy trappings of equipage, dwelling in a palace, and courted by admiring crouds, is yet insensible to the charms of literature, that ever changing, yet inexhaustible source of purest happiness. Though greeted with smiles, and the shallow protestations of friendship are lavished upon him; yet, even among those whose lips drop honey, whose countenances beam in sunny smiles, the poison of envy insidiously lurks in the heart, awaiting but the moment when it may be vented with security upon its unhappy victim. The hand of fraud or misfortune may in a moment deprive him of those treasures on which he rests his every hope of happiness and distinction. In that dark hour of adversity, where is the ephemeral selfish croud, who spread their glittering wings and fluttered round, exhausting their utmost art to sooth his vanity by the mellifluous murmurings of adulation, ministering to his pleasures even to satiety? Fled! for ever fled! like wanton bees to sip the fragrance of another flower, leaving their sting behind. At this heart-rending hour when, the veil of deception is cast aside, and the unreal mockery is exposed, with the heart pierced by the arrows of disappointment, writhing under the agonies of wounded pride, where shall the deluded victim find a refuge from despair! from self destruction!

"Around he throws his agonizing gaze,
"Already dead to hope, and love, and praise;
"By keen sensation wounded to the soul,
"He ponders on the world, abhors the whole."

At that plastic age, when the heart is susceptible of the purest affections, the genius of literature with the virtues in her train, stretched forth her saving hand to lead him to her sequestered shades, blooming with amaranthine flowers, smiling in the mild, yet fadeless beams of intellectual suns. But a false goddess, decked in the flaunting tinsel robes of pageantry, surrounded by the syrens of dissipation, lured him with the voice of flattery to her embraces, whelmed him in the vortex of worldly pleasures, brutalizing his mind and corrupting his heart! and shall the intellectual being, whose warnings he spurned, whose proffered friendship he repulsed with contempt, and through a long series of vices and follies utterly neglected, now receive him? Never! where then shall he seek a refuge from despair, an oblivious antidote to the visitings of remorse?—Amid the loathesome haunts of inebriety!—This is a picture humiliating and revolting to our best feelings; it is nevertheless a truth on which the experience of every age has set its seal.—Let us turn from it.

Blessed and honoured above others be the memory of that man who first invented books! if vexations irritate my feelings, or the monotonous tone of the society into which I may be occasionly thrown, overwhelms me with ennui, I seize the earliest opportunity, sometimes stretching a little, the point of politeness, to return to the circle of my selected friends, and, seated in my elbow chair, by the assistance of their philosophical, or fanciful conversation, soothe the irritability, or awaken the palsied sensibility of my mind. And there is this peculiar advantage attending their most familiar intercourse; they possess the invariable attribute of genius,—retiring modesty. They are utterly incapable of obtruding their opinions, or teasing with impertinent questions; but satisfied to instruct or amuse whilst we are willing to listen, and retiring at the first symptom of expiring interest. Not so those walking books, those chronicles of the times, who, more desirous of gratifying their own vanity, than to amuse or instruct their auditors, dwell with a wearisome minuteness on "the thrice told tale," of which in all probability they are themselves the heroes, though you should be evidently expiring with disgust or drowsines: depress your spirits by an exaggerated narrative of a tale of wo, often through mere spite, when your heart is lightly dancing on the tiptoe of anticipated pleasure; or force upon your revolting ears crude, boisterous, and impotent attempts at wit or humour, when your heart is lacerated by grief, or torn by secret vexations. As a refuge from the danger of this aggravated evil, the greatest sure that could be devised by the ingenuity of tyranny, blessed be the man who first invented books! Seated in the midst of this select, this "chosen few," of what can we complain!

"Meditation here,
May think down hours to moments."

If, tired of the dull monotony of reality, I mount with Shakespeare or Milton, into the sublimated regions of fancy, and leave the grovelling "world for fools to bustle in;" taking good care, however, to break my fall upon my return, by the demi-sublimity of Southey's ponderous muse. If military ardour inflame my mind, by the assistance of the mighty Homer, I case myself in the discarded armor of Achilles, and waring on valiant, virtuous Hector's side, I dash my blood stained chariot o'er the plain, crushing whole legions of the invading Greeks, bearing destruction and dismay even to their fleet; or, seated among the gods, "on Ida's piny top," govern the destinies of contending hosts: and in the indulgence of this classical warfare, I have this advantage over those who cool their passions by a vulgar, every day affray—I always return from the fiercest contest, full satisfied, with the inestimable blessings of whole bones and unbruised flesh.

Should the spleen, attempt an usurpation, before the laughter moying sway of a Cervantes, a Rabelais, a Knickerbocker, or a Swift, the "foul fiend," evaporates in a yellow mist, or returns to its paternal seat in the brain of a "mad John Dennis." Is my heart dissolved in the agonizing blisses of the tenderest passion, and would wish to pour forth its plaints, a thing of course, in liquid numbers? By assuming to myself the mellifluous murmurings of a Shenstone, or a Hammond, I may waft my very soul in sighs, or luxuriate in the delectable dreams of a Petrarch; and I believe that lovers, like poets, as the ingenious Waller told king Charles, "always succeed best in fiction." Am I in a moralizing strain? which by the by for my own happiness I am too apt to be, the sententious Johnson affords me at the same time the most profound and impressive subjects, and the most sublime and eloquently expressed reflections; and yet, although the posthumous Johnson is the most instructive and delightful of companions, I would not, if Anne Seward has drawn a correct portrait of the "literary Goliah," endure five minutes tete-a-tete with the living Johnson for the universe. But it should be remembered that he said of that tenacious lady, that "she had nothing of the woman about her, but the vices." Certainly those biographers, who industriously, and too often maliciously, set forth the imperfections of their authors, deprive us of a very considerable proportion of the pleasure we should otherwise feel, in the perusal of their productions; but:

"Wits are like game-cocks to each other,
No wit could e'er endure a brother."

Who would not believe that the author of the inimitable Rasselas was the most amiable, as well as the wisest of human beings; were it not for the kind souls who have handed him down to posterity as the most morose and overbearing. For what purpose, unless to relieve their minds from the burthen of envy, certainly a most troublesome guest, and wisely ejected by any means, I never could tell. But truly in this instance the poisoned chalice is justly returned to his own lips, who has afforded so powerful a precedent, by venting the utmost bitterness of his gall upon an inoffensive race of poets.—Yet does the sweet nightingale warble less melodiously because the boding raven drowns its voice with envious croakings?

Inspired bards shall consecrate the shrine
Where sleeps the minstrel of the art divine.
More lov'd his song, that envious critic's rage,
And dare to plant the nightshade on his grave.
There, dew'd with tears, springs earliest rose shall bloom;
There still the latest smile upon his tomb,
And breathe the incense of their soft perfume:
The dews of heaven with verdure deck the ground,
And bays and laurels spring spontaneous round.
There virtuous youth, their grateful homage breathe,
And tender virgins weave the laureat wreathe.

Let us be grateful to that man who, by the invention of books, has annihilated time and space, and has thus enabled us to retire to our closets, and enjoy a familiar converse with a Pliny, a Horace and a Plutarch, and thus informed us how a Cæsar combated, a Plato thought—who has bequeathed to generations yet unborn, the inspirations of a Homer or Virgil, and the sweet bard of Avon:

"Those mighty masters of the living lyre."

But above all who has placed in the hands of millions, who would otherwise have remained in utter darkness, the consoling, blessed and everlasting book of life and immortality—the immutable word of a just and merciful God. Let us in the morning and meridian of life, cherish with unceasing care a love of literature, and continue an intercourse with those authors who will refine our taste, correct our judgment, supply us with useful knowledge, and create, or nourish a love of patriotism, virtue, and religion; and so provide a goodly stock of reflections, to cheer, the otherwise dreary winter of our declining years. But in the selection of those confidential friends who are to be the chosen companions of our solitude, let us be ever strictly on our guard, lest under attractive appearances, we should admit to our confidence and esteem, an insidious foe, lurking under the splendid garb of genius, blasting our happiness both here and hereafter.

"Books are not seldom talismans and spells,
By which the magic art of shrewder wits
Holds an unthinking multitude enthrall'd,
Some to the fascination of a name
Surrender judgment hood-wink'd. Some the style
Infatuates, and through labyrinths and wilds
Of error, leads them by a tune entranc'd.

Let us, therefore, beware of the Rousseaus, the Paines, the Godwins and Voltaires, who, in the insulted name of virtue, allure to vice; and then may we with truth exclaim to the last moment of our lives, blessed be that man who invented books.

MARMADUKE OLDSTYLE.

FROM THE CINCINNATI (OHIO) GAZETTE.

MERCHANT'S DIARY FOR HALF A DAY.

Rose at 6 o'clock A. M. regulated the store, puffed a segar, and walked the pavement in slippers until 7, then prepared for breakfast, and while adjusting my cravat, was accosted by a boy, with how do you sell coffee? —'Thirty seven & a half cents,' I replied, & away he went. Breakfasted at half past seven, and placing myself behind the counter, eyed with wishful expectancy the crowd as they passed my door. At 9 I was aroused by the shrill exclamation of 'how do you sell domestics here?' from an elderly looking woman, with an empty basket on her arm, & a huge corn cob pipe in her mouth; but having learned the price, & overhauled every thing she could lay her hands upon, she deliberately passed into the next store. While replacing my goods, a very unwelcome visitor called, no other than a Runner from one of the Banks, with a request that I would accept a draft. 'A draft indeed: I wish the d—l would take all such torments,' said I and while writing, with a trembling hand, the word 'accepted,' in came a fine sprightly Belle. Ah, thinks I, lovely girl, if you would only write 'accepted' —'Pray, sir, have you any thread lace?' 'A very fine assortment, Miss,' answered I. Then the silks and ribands, and bonnets and shawls, and gloves, crapes and satins; were all displayed in glittering profusion, with many a round assertion from me of their superior excellence and cheapness, and in return I received a most gracious smile, with 'I'll call again sir.' 'I hope not, muttered I, as she left the door. Thinks I to myself, Cowper must have been a merchant, or he never could have written so correctly of the ladies, as when he says—

'The Merchant's plague, from shop to shop,
'Wandering and littering with unfolded silks,
'The polished counter, and approving none,
'Or promising with smiles to call again.

'It was now 12 o'clock, I had a note to pay in Bank, and was just going out to borrow the money, when I was met by three bouncing country girls, and their gallant attendants.—Now for the cash, thought I. Again the polished counter was bedecked, and after much persuasion, they consented to take a quarter of a yard of Leno, if I would throw in a thread to make it up with. To this I objected, they insisted, and in order to get clear of them, I at length complied.

I now sallied forth in good earnest to borrow money, met two or three of my neighbours on the same business, succeeded in part, and, as a dernier resort, proceeded to the Brokers, and sold at six per-cent discount, all my receipts for the last two weeks, and, quite out of breath, reached the Bank just as they were closing doors.

The above, Messrs. Editors, is a faithful picture of a merchant's employment for half a day; if any one covet his situation, I wish he had it. If any one doubt the statement, I hope he may yet be a tape seller in Cincinnati; and if the girls should laugh at it, I pray them beware, for although they receive our best bow as often as they honour us with their visits, still we are a discriminating set of fellows, and if we but get a little of their cash, we learn, or at least pretend to learn, much of their real character and disposition, when exhibiting to them our wares and merchandize. X.

PHENOMENON.

Some accounts which we have just received from our friends, who are sojourning for the summer, in the immediate neighbourhood of the ocean, are at once so singular in themselves and so respectable as to their sources, that we have no hesitation in laying them before the public. It is stated that our whole seaboard as well as the waters which bound and intersect it, are at present strewed with the carcasses of fish. Not only the kinds which are usually caught there, are seen in great variety and immense abundance, but some species are occasionally found with which our fishing gentry have never had any acquaintance. The appearances thus presented are at once interesting and mournful. Although the fish are in general when met with, perfectly dead, this is not always the case, for when those which still retain signs of life are from motives of curiosity thrown again into deep water, the only use they appear to make of their remaining power of muscular action, is to escape from that element for which nature designed them, and to regain the beach on which they have been cast. About three weeks ago, five or six large fish of the whale species, were discovered dead upon the beach, within a few miles of the entrance of our harbor. This unusual occurrence excited much surprize at the time, and it is more than probable that it was produced by the same cause which is now operating so fatally upon the lesser fish. With regard to what this cause is, much difference of opinion will doubtless exist. It is remarkable that the surface of the sea is frequently coated over with an extraneous substance of an oily appearance. The existence of these two phenomena at the same time, forms the belief that they are in some way connected with each other. We will submit them however to the curiosity of those who have enjoyed better opportunities than we of informing themselves on such subjects, after venturing to support the only explanation that has happened to occur to us. —For the last six weeks, the wind has blown with little or no change, and almost without intermission from the southward and westward. The consequence is known to be that a strong and steady current has for sometime past been setting along the coast to the northward and eastward. May not the action of this current, (which is believed to be without example) have had an effect to bare the copper banks that have been ascertained to abound in the more southern latitudes? And if so, may not the increased exposure of these banks have imparted to the "watry deep," the poisonous existence it seems to bear upon its "mountain wave?"

From the Auburn Gazette.

Domestic Manufactures.—The Assessors of the town of Mentz, in taking the Assessment, took an account of the Woolen, Linnen, and Maple Sugar, made in the town last year, and find there was 9272 yards of Woolen, 10407 yards of Linnen and 25645 pounds of Maple Sugar.

When it is known that there are but 296 taxable inhabitants in the town, and that the crops of flax were generally light and the season for making Sugar quite indifferent; we are surprised to see the above quantities.

One more Evidence of the Efficacious quality of Pipsissiway in curing Cancers.—James Lewis, of this county, has called upon us and wishes us to make known, that he was cured of a very large Cancer by the use of Pipsissiway tea, and a strong decoction of the same which he applied to the sore, in the space of three weeks time. The cancer was on his cheek; the scar of which is still visible, and shows it to have increased to an alarming degree. He likewise affirms that it will cure other eruptions.

To the Electors of Allegheny County.

FELLOW CITIZENS,

I OFFER myself as a candidate for the office of COMMISSIONER, at the ensuing general Election. Should I be elected, the public may rest assured that I will do my part of the duties required in that office.

JOHN FEARIS.

Pittsburgh, August 7, 1818.

To the Independent Electors of Allegheny County.

Fellow Citizens,

I BEG leave to offer myself a Candidate for the Office of COUNTY COMMISSIONER, at the ensuing General Election. Should I be elected, the public at large may rest assured of my paying strict attention to the duties of the Office, and of preventing as far as lies in my power, any useless expenditure of the public money, either for new Jail, Court House or Penetentiary.

ROBERT MAGEE.

The Pittsburgh Gazette.

TUESDAY MORNING, AUGUST 18, 1818.

The duties of an Editor we consider to be most important, and next in point of respectability to those of instructors of youth. Any thing in print, has upon the common mind a power, which enlightened men are scarcely aware of; now, as newspapers are in general circulation through the United States, and as in the majority of families these, with the Bible, form the only study during the cessation of business and labour, the influence which they must have, is powerful; the greatest caution therefore becomes necessary, in disseminating principles thro' so important a channel. The columns of the Gazette are frequently folded beneath the cover of the sacred book, and the implicit credence that is given to the one, is very generally transferred to the other. With this conviction of the importance of the charge, and probably somewhat proud of the duties ourselves, we regret to see the pages of too many of our journals, particularly of those called country papers, devoted to a style, that we conceive, is most disgusting to our feelings.—We feel pain, when we find an Editor's name mentioned in another paper, in a manner different from that, in which we conceive a gentleman ought to be addressed in the common intercourse of life; and it is still more grating, to see those who actually fill the highest offices in the state, treated in vulgar allusions, and pointless squibs, with all the ribaldry that one could expect to be heaped by his opponents, on the candidate for a town-ship constable. What must the neighboring states think of Pennsylvania, when they observe constantly in our papers, the Governor of this great state spoken of, as "Billy Findlay," "a usurper," and in a thousand other ways, tending to create a contempt, not only for the man, but for the sacred office itself.—We do not profess any great esteem for Mr. Findlay, but as a Governor of one of the first states in the union, we wish to hear him spoken of with that respect which his office ought to inspire. If he be guilty of improper conduct, let him be brought before the public seriously and with dignity, and let the act of which he may be charged, be stated at the same time. We are positively banishing every thing like national feeling, by this kind of behavior; and destroy the pride which we may have for the state of our nativity, and it is but one step further to neutralize the respect which we ought to entertain for our country in general. It is a circumstance much to be regretted, that in Pennsylvania, the first characters in point of respectability, abilities and information, are kept back through an unfortunate state of public prejudice. It is somewhat mortifying to our pride, when we find our sister states estimating our talents by a standard formed from our characters in public office; this mortification however, is daily diminishing, and a knowledge of our political situation is spreading pretty generally through the United States. But yet, the office ought to be held sacred, an incumbent cannot disgrace it, and it ought to be preserved, in the public mind, in all its solemn purity, to create a respect for our country, and for the laws which support it. What may be Mr. Findlay's talents, we have yet to learn; from his message, which is the only specimen of his mind, we have seen, he can have no great pretensions to scholarship; but that he posseses a good understanding we, at present, do not doubt; and that he will go through his three years career with respectability, we do not hesitate to believe. But however this may be, we are sorry to find some Editors, in the middle part of our state, assuming the manner they do.

Captain Symmes theory of the Earth, lately published at St. Louis, is not quite so novel, as is generally thought; the idea of the Globe being hollow at the poles, was suggested many years since. In a work published in Paris, by an anonymous writer, called "New conjectures on the Globe of the Earth," the author asserts, "that in examining the internal parts of the globe, it is not possible to doubt, but it is a composition of several beds of slime arranged upon each other, by the waters of the rivers, and consisting of the substances which they contain, and which these rivers carry off from the fishing grounds, in order to deposit them in their banks, or in the bottom of the sea, to which they run; that the globe of the earth was originally formed of a flat crust, composed of these depositions; that this crust being very thin (only two thousand three hundred and eighty fathoms thick) includes a very subtle air, supported by the weight of a double atmosphere which surrounds it; that this equilibrium having ceased at the time of the deluge, this crust was broken and scattered; that its wrecks floated in the air, as the clouds do in the air, and were grouped on each other, and in certain parts have accumulated as to form certain protuberences; that our mountains proceeded from this; that by this substraction from the crust of the earth, of the pieces by which the mountains were then formed, there remained vacuities in this crust two or three hundred leagues in diameter; that it is by the means of these apertures, that the seas of both surfaces of this crust, at present communicate with each other; that these seas enter by the poles into the cavity of the globe, and turning round this cavity in a spiral line, they come out between the tropics; that the entries of these waters from the external to the internal surface of the earth, and their departure from the internal to the external surface, are the causes of the flux and reflux of the sea, which are more sensible in one part than another, according to the position and largeness of the passages through which these seas enter or come out."

Steam Boat News.

LOUISVILLE, (K.) August 1.

Steam Boat Washington leaves here this evening for New-Orleans; full cargo.

A passenger from on board Steam Boat Governor Shelby, arrived here last evening, who left the boat the 25th ult. at the mouth of Cumberland; to leave there that day for this place.

The Vesuvius was at Fort Massac the 24th.

As the Ohio river has been in good boating order for the last week, we may expect the above boats here hourly.

The Buffaloe is getting up slowly.

The Monroe is waiting the fall of the river to repair.

The Eagle arrived at Natchez the 15th ultimo.

Steam Boat Ohio has broke her cranks, coming on but slowly.

Nothing from the Napoleon since leaving Orleans.

St. Louis, July 7.

The Steam Boat Harriet arrived here on Sunday last, with freight and passengers from New-Orleans.

New-Orleans, July 14.

The Steam Boat George Madison will leave here for Shippingport, this afternoon.

The Steam Boat New-Orleans, captain Lawrence, arrived last Saturday evening. She will receive freight on Wednesday and Thursday, for Natchez, and depart on Saturday next.

Mobile, July 3.

The Steam Boat Alabama, capt. R. W. Lewis, left this town yesterday evening, with freight and passengers for St. Stephens: She appears to be a boat of the first class, and her machinery is equal to any we have seen. We are informed that her next trip will be for New Orleans, via the Balize: we wish her success and sincerely hope that her enterprizing owners may reap a rich reward for their glorious and public enterprize.

Office of the Charleston Courier,
Tuesday morning, July 29.

From Havanna.—Captain Welsman, of the brig Catharine, informs us that the intelligence of the Cession of the Floridas to the U. States, was very generally believed at Havanna; and gave much satisfaction to most of the inhabitants, who were apprehensive that a war with this country, would otherwise have grown out of the late occupation of Pensacola.

Extract of a letter received at Charleston.

HAVANNA, July 17.

"Gentlenmen—Captain Bonnell, of your city, has just arrived from Cadiz, and announces the final Cession of the Floridas by Spain, to the United States. We are thus happily relieved from every apprehension of any misunderstanding having existed between the two countries, and still sincerely anticipate the good disposition of the people of this Island towards us. Every thing here remains perfectly quiet. I enclose you our latest Price Current, and remain, &c."

Letters dated early in July, at Mobile in the Alabama Territory mention that it then continued healthy in that town: but that several persons were visited with the bilious fever at the neighbouring town of Blakely.

NEW-YORK, Aug. 4.

From New Orleans.—By the arrival this morning of the ship Annisquam, Capt. Fowler, in 15 days from New Orleans, we have received the papers of that city to the 16th ult. They contain the returns from 12 Parishes, of the late election for Congress, giving thus far the following result;—

For Mr. Butler	1205
Mr. Livingston	1171
Mr. Butler's present majority	34.

GENEVA, (Ontario County,) July 29.

The Chatauque Gazette says that Mr. Buffington, of Portland, in that county, has resumed his laborious undertaking in search of salt water. He has perforated 100 feet further into the rock, making altogether six hundred and thirty feet; which is believed to be 100 feet lower than the level of the tide waters of the Hudson river at Albany, and 300 feet lower than the greatest known depth of Lake Erie. Mr. B's. object is still unattained.

ROBBERY OF THE PORTLAND BANK.

PALLADIUM OFFICE, BOSTON, Aug. 4.

The Cumberland Bank at Portland, was opened on Saturday night last, with false keys, and robbed of Two Hundred Thousand Dollars in bills, 1600 in gold, and five thousand four hundred dollars in silver. Part of the latter has been recovered. A reward of one thousand dollars is offered for the thieves and money, or five hundred for either.

Extraordinary Effort.—It is stated in the Portsmouth Oracle of Saturday last, that, on the 27th of July, a person, in the vicinity of Portsmouth, mowed, between sunrise and one o'clock, upwards of two acres of grass, which yielded, as was supposed about four tons of hay.

From Jamaica.—By the Cora, from Kingston, (Jam.) we have received from our esteemed correspondent, papers of that place to the 14th ult. Flour was worth from 14½ to 15 dollars per bbl. At a public sale of coffee, on the 14th July, that article was disposed of at 6*l.* per cwt. or 18 cts. per lb. Another sale was at 115s. Triage, 80s. A private sale was also made for a small quantity of prime at 6*l.* 2s. 6d.

A SMALL FAMILY TO PROVIDE FOR.

At a late Durbar held by Runject Singh, at Lahore, to receive a Vakeel returned from Cashmere, with due honour, the following statement was received: What might be the revenues of the state to meet the expenses of portioning off these descendants of Royalty, must be left to the Chancellor of the Exchequer of that kingdom—certainly, no European treasury would be able to meet them.

The Vakeel from Cashmere was introduced, and presented several presents—he expressed the anxiety his sovereign felt to continue on amicable terms with the King of the Sikbs, and on being questioned respecting the resources of the kingdom of Iran, he replied, that the king had a large revenue, Two Hundred and Fifty Sons and One Thousand and Eight Wives! N. Y. D. Adt.

A new edition of Shakespeare, translated by M. Letourneur, has been published in Paris, in 20 vols. with plates.

WARSAW, (Poland) May 11.

Lt. Gen. de Czernitzcheff has departed for Stockholm, to bear the compliments of the Emperor of Russia to the King of Sweden, on his succession to the throne.

WATERLOO.

A gentleman of this town, lately returned from Europe, took an opportunity last spring, of visiting the spot where the famous battle of Waterloo was fought in June, 1815, which terminated the great European conflict, and was succeeded by the final extinction of Bonaparte's military career. The person who conducted him to the spot, was the same who attended Bonaparte and his staff, as topographical guide, on the memorable 18th of June. He informed that on the battle field (an extensive plain) was raised last year, an uncommon luxuriant crop of wheat; and well it might for it was fertilized by the blood of 80,000 soldiers, who fell in that sanguinary battle. The gentleman picked up an eagle, such as are worn by the French infantry, and, two musket balls, which are now in his possession. The surface of the ground over the pit in which were thrown many thousands of the slain, both men and beasts in one undistiguishable mass, is sunk considerably lower than the surrounding earth, and distinctly marks the extent of the vast cemetry,

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 10.

A person of respectable character has published in a Brest paper a singular fact which appears worthy the attention of practioners. It is well known that the large house-leek has been successfully used against corns. This gentleman asserts that being one day attacked with a violent pain in one of his toes, which seemed to threaten a fit of the gout, he applied the house-leek; the relief he experienced encouraged him to continue the experiment; he mentioned it to several of his friends who were subject to the gout; the success has always answered his expectation. It appears incontestible to him, that house-leek calms and eases, he does not say cures, this cruel disorder, with which so many old men are afflicted, and he invites gentlemen of the faculty to examine whether chance has not procured him the honour and happiness of making a discovery which will prove useful to the world

The house-leek is pounded after having the outside skin taken off.

EMIGRATION.

The Dublin Evening Post, of the 2d of June, gives credit to the Cork Reporter, for the following article:—

"There will depart from this harbour within seven or eight days, three vessels for different ports in America, which are all of considerable burden, but they are totally inadequate to give an accommodation to the numbers who are seeking for passages. On Saturday week, the John Adams sailed with her full complement, and, we believe, if those laws did not exist which prohibit the emigration of artificers and tradesmen, there would be abundant employment for many constant traders between this port and the United States—such is the want of employment at home and the many inducements that offer on the other side of the Atlantic."

MESSRS. EDITORS,

The essay I enclose you "On the Pleasures of Reading," has been published in the Port Folio: but is now revised and enlarged. If your "Anonymous" lucubrater can spare room, and you are desirous, it is at your service for publication.

SYDNEY.

One Hundred Dollars Reward,

WILL be given for apprehending and securing in any jail, so that I may get him again,

Negroe Barney,

who calls himself HENRY. He is a mulattoe fellow, 18 or 19 years of age, and 5 feet 7 or 8 inches or perhaps 9 high—straight and well made, with bushy hair, has a scar upon one of his cheeks near the ear, about the size of, or perhaps larger than a grain of corn, he has also one or two scars on one of his arms. He is a smart active fellow, and a good cook and house servant. His clothing when he left me consisted of a velvet roundabout and trowsers, an old black silk jacket, an old fur hat with a narrow rim, and a pair of new shoes. The above described fellow was taken up by me at Pittsburgh three or four weeks ago, and made his escape from me near Chambersburgh, since when I have been informed he was seen in company with three other negroes on the way to Pittsburgh. He was in the employ of a Mr. Anderson as a carter when he was taken up in Pittsburgh.

EPIGRAM.

My love, so quick the moments fly
On pinions light, o'er you and I,
They're gone before we know it;
And while we spend our time in wooing,
I wiser, you are older growing,
And yet we do not shew it.

Then be advis'd before too late,
Let maiden coyness now abate,
Or haply you may rue it;—
For should'st thou Sue much older get,
Or I regain my mother wit,
I'm sure we'll never woo it.

FROM THE OLIO OF A DESULTORY READER.

VEGETABLES.

AMONG the vegetable productions of South America, there is none that more justly deserves our notice than the tree which yields the celebrated febrifuge, popularly called Jesuits-bark. It is also called quinquina, and palo de calenturas, or fever-wood, on account of its extraordinary virtue in removing all kinds of intermitting fevers and agues. The tree which produces this noble specific grows only in the interior parts of Peru, on the mountains near Loxa, in the province of Quito; at least the best sort (for there are different species of this tree) is no where else to be found, according to the account of Mr. Arrot. It is a pretty tall tree, and has a trunk rather bigger than a man's thigh, tapering from the root upwards, and free from branches till near the top, where they shoot out as regularly as if they were lopped, forming with the leaves the figure of a hemisphere. The bark is of a blackish colour on the outside, and sometimes mixed with white spots, from whence commonly grows a kind of moss, which the Spaniards call barbas. Its leaves are much like those of our plum-tree, of a darkish green colour on the upper side, and reddish on the lower. It bears a red flower, which is succeeded by a sort of pod, enclosing a seed somewhat like a hop-seed; though Dr. Oliver represents its fruit as resembling a chesnut. The soil where the best sort thrives is generally a reddish earth or rocky ground, and frequently on the banks of the rivulets that fall from the mountains. Mr. Arrot adds, that it flourishes and bears fruit at the same time all the year round.

The bark-trees do not grow together in great numbers, but are intermixed with others in the woods. Sometimes indeed it happens that clusters of them are found together, but at present they are much scarcer than formerly, a great many fine large ones having been entirely cut down in order to come at the bark more easily. The properest season for cutting the bark is from September to November, the only time in the year that there is some intermission from rain in the mountains..... Having discovered a spot where the trees most abound, the workmen build huts near it for themselves, and a large hut to put the bark in, to preserve it from the wet: but they remove it from hence as soon as possible to the nearest plantation or farm house in the low country to dry, which is done by spreading it abroad in the open air, and turning it frequently.

LAND AGENCY.

THE Subscribers, under the firm of JESSE EMBREE & Co. have opened in Cincinnatt, (Ohio) an office for the purchase and sale of land, and of general land intelligence, in which they have taken measures to concenter, not only all the district plots of United States' lands in the Western country, with a considerable part of the field notes, which describe the quality and soil, but such other topographical information as considerable personal observation, and an extensive correspondence have placed within their reach —They have also established agencies in the different sections of this country, and consequently will be able to answer the enquiries and execute the orders of their patrons with the greatest possible dispatch.—As it is the intention of the proprietors to render this institution both permanent and useful, it is scarcely necessary to add, that no exertion shall be wanting on their part to merit the confidence and patronage of those who may wish to make use of their services in the line of their business.—They will transact on commission, or for a reasonable compensation, all kinds of negociation connected with the soil; such as purchasing of individuals or in the offices of the United States, paying taxes, &c. and will act as agents in all landed concerns. They keep a register, in which is entered for the perusal of enquirers, the description of all real property placed under their care for sale, and as they have now a great variety on hand, purchasers can have an extensive choice. Selecting and entering Congress Lands will constitute an important item in their business, and in this way they expect to be most useful to their friends at a distance. Letters addressed in the name of the firm, (post paid) to this place, will receive the most prompt attention.

A Most Valuable Estate,

FOR SALE.

THAT beautiful estate, commonly known by the name of MONTOURS' or LONG ISLAND, about five miles below Pittsburgh, in the Ohio river, containing in the whole 1,000 acres is offered for sale. It is divided into three separate tracts, on each of which there are handsome improvements; the land is of the best quality, well timbered, and not subject to overflow. It is universally esteemed, both as to soil and situation, the finest property in the western country. The proprietors would prefer selling the whole in a body, but to suit purchasers, it will be divided into three tracts.

The terms may be known by applying to Major Isaac Craig on the premises, or to the subscriber, who is agent for the proprietors, at his office in Pittsburgh.
